Ram and Red Raider Judy Parker Begins New Chapter in the Courtroom

After serving the justice system and her communities for more than 30 years, Angelo State University and Texas Tech University School of Law alumna Judy Parker was sworn in by Gov. Greg Abbott as a justice on the Seventh Court of Appeals of Texas on Oct. 19.

Parker, a native of Central Texas, graduated from ASU in 1982 and made the move to Lubbock to attend law school. Parker remained in Lubbock after graduating law school to practice privately and serve as a judge on various courts before her appointment to the Seventh Court of Appeals.

When asked if the TTU System motto – “From Here, It’s Possible” – reflects her time at system institutions, Parker didn’t hesitate.

“Oh most certainly. My college and legal education gave me the background and foundation to enter a profession that had been my dream since I was a young girl, and it has led to a long and meaningful career, and any success I have enjoyed was made possible by the excellent education I received at ASU and TTU School of Law. I am profoundly grateful.”

Parker will run for election to a full term on the Seventh Court in 2018.

Facility Spotlight: TTU Sports Performance Center

On Oct. 20, Texas Tech Athletics hosted a ribbon-cutting ceremony for the Sports Performance Center (SPC), a $48 million, 154,889-square-foot multi-purpose facility that will impact all 17 intercollegiate athletics programs.

The SPC was funded entirely by philanthropic gifts to The Campaign for Fearless Champions and is among the first multi-sport venues in the country, providing Texas Tech student-athletes a state-of-the-art facility for daily training and competition.

The facility includes the Petersen Family Indoor Football Practice Facility, an indoor track and field competition complex with seating for 1,500 fans, a strength and conditioning area, the Becky and Kelly Joy Family Sports Medicine Center and the PlainsCapital Bank Nutrition Center.

The facility is designed to impact Texas Tech’s more than 450 student-athletes. The PlainsCapital Bank Nutrition Center will be the hub for the athletics department’s investment in nutrition and wellness. The Becky and Kelly Joy Family Sports Medicine Center will provide the Texas Tech sports medicine staff with first-class equipment to diagnose injuries as well as a rehab area to assist student-athletes in recovery.

As part of the TTU System Public Art Program, “Run” (2017) by Simon Donovan and Ben Olmstead stands prominently outside of the SPC. The artwork, made of 240 separate metal layers held together by 12,000 welded pins, depicts a female runner during five phases of motion. The 12-foot tall stainless steel sculpture stands on a 6-foot tall concrete base resulting in a towering 18-foot installation complete with state-of-the-art LED lighting to create an impressive red glow in the evening.

Texas Tech Athletics Announces Lead Gift, Plans for Basketball Practice Facility

Texas Tech University announced a gift of $10 million from the Dusty and Leisha Womble family to support construction of a proposed practice facility for men's and women's basketball.

The Dustin R. Womble Basketball Practice Facility will include two practice courts, a strength and conditioning weight room, offices for men's and women's basketball coaches, team meeting rooms, and sports medicine and nutrition areas. University leaders estimate the proposed facility will cost a total of $23 million.

The gift is one of the largest commitments to The Campaign for Fearless Champions, which has already funded 22 of 25 facilities projects, surpassed its goal of raising $10 million in student-athlete scholarship endowments and exceeded its goal of securing a $5 million endowment for the J.T. & Margaret Talkington Leadership Academy, a first-of-its-kind, leadership and career development program that prepares student-athletes for success after graduation.

TTU Vietnam Archive Renamed to Honor War Veteran

The Texas Tech University Vietnam Archive was renamed the Sam Johnson Vietnam Archive on Oct. 18 in honor of the U.S. Congressman who has worked tirelessly to benefit troops and veterans since his own 29-year career in the U.S. Air Force.

U.S. Rep. Sam Johnson, 87, flew combat missions in both the Korean and Vietnam Wars and endured nearly seven years as a prisoner of war (POW), including 42 months in solitary confinement. He chronicled his experience in an oral history now housed in the Vietnam Center and Archive, the nation's largest and most comprehensive collection of information on the Vietnam War.

After his military service, Johnson returned home to the Dallas area, where he served in the Texas House of Representatives from 1985 to 1991 and in the U.S. House of Representatives since 1991.

The Vietnam Center and Archive houses the Virtual Vietnam Archive, which has been used by a wide range of researchers, scholars, documentary film makers, teachers and students as the world continues to learn about the Vietnam War. It also has been used by various U.S. governmental agencies in providing lessons learned for more contemporary conflicts and in accounting for the more than 1,600 U.S. personnel still listed as missing from the war.

Johnson was an advocate for the creation of the Virtual Vietnam Archive, and his late wife, Shirley, donated her personal collection of papers and materials.

The Vietnam Archives at Texas Tech were named after Vietnam Veteran and U.S. Representative, Sam Johnson.
