Market Overview

A flurry of headlines around potential policy changes fueled widespread uncertainty, weighing down sentiment and reigniting concerns around economic growth. U.S. equities underperformed global counterparts. The S&P 500 Index fell 1.3% in February. The Russell 1000 Value Index eked out a 0.4% gain for the month, while the Russell 1000 Growth fell 3.6%. On a year-to-date basis with the value index up 5.1%, while growth remains in the red with losses of 1.7%.

Index Returns	MTD	1-Year
S&P 500	5.9%	33.9%
MSCI ACWI TR Net USD	3.7%	36.4%
MSCI EM TR Net USD	-3.6%	26.1%
Bloomberg Global Agg USD	0.3%	4.6%
Global 60/40	2.4%	17.1%

Foreign markets were bolstered by a weaker dollar and improving economic data. The MSCI EAFE and MSCI Emerging Markets indexes gained 1.9% and 0.5%, respectively in February. China was the best performing market—the MSCI China Index added 11.8% in February.

Growth concerns fueled downward pressure in interest rates and gains across most fixed-income securities. In the U.S., yields fell across the curve, with 10- and 30-year Treasury yields falling 33 and 30 basis points, respectively. The spread on the Bloomberg U.S. High Yield Corporate Index increased 20 basis points to 280; however, this level still remains within long-term median spread levels. The spread widening weighed on credit indexes on a relative basis: the Bloomberg U.S. High Yield Corporate Index ended modestly higher, adding 0.7% in February.

Within real assets, spot gold prices extended recent gains, returning 2.2% last month, amid the supportive macroeconomic backdrop and demand for safe-haven assets. The commodity complex continues to see significant dispersion, with crude oil prices falling 4.3%, even as the Bloomberg Commodity Index increased 0.8%.
